

TWO MEASUREMENTS OF EFFICIENCY OF THE MANAGEMENT STRUCTURE

Pozhidaev R. G.

Notion of efficiency of the management structure is possible to consider with several standpoints. First, this efficiency of the new structure for correspondences to the strategy and achievements the organization's purposes. It's defined by collation desired and actual result which has been reached by organization for period the strategy's realization. Secondly, this cost-performance of the designing and introducing of the new structure of management which is defined by correlation between the expenses to reorganization and got by effect. Finally, this efficiency of the subsystem of management which is defined by degree of the execution standards and rules acting in the company.