

"MANOR-BOROUGH" PHENOMENON IN EARLY MODERN ENGLAND

Vinokurova M. V.

For the first time in Russian medievalistics the article deals with the "manor-borough" phenomenon which existed in some counties of the early modern England. Analysing earls of Pembroke's manor rentals from Wiltshire the author investigates not only typological characteristics of the said communities, but the specifics of combination of the town and rural life in these settlements as well.